*Note: Historic districts consist of Contrib-uting and non-Contrib-uting resources. These can be objects, structures, buildings, and sites within the district that are associated with the significant historic contexts for the district. Generally, to be deemed as contributing, the age of the resource should be within the period of significance for the district. The National Register of Historic Places nomination for Jackson Park and the Midway Plaisance from 1972 did not identify a period of significance. The recommended period of significance for Jackson Park and the Midway Plaisance is 1875 to 1953.

This period includes the initial implementation of the first South Park design and the gradual renewal of Jackson Park and the Midway Plaisance after demolition of the 1893 World's Columbian Exposition. The timeframe encompasses design and initial construction in the 1870s, the 1893 World's Fair, and subsequent redevelopment as a park based on the 1895-1897 plans of Olmsted, Olmsted & Elliot and additions associated with the Works Progress Administration (WPA) and the Chicago Parks District (CPD) through 1953. Purposeful alterations that were not complimentary to or an outgrowth of the historic design happened with increased frequency in the 1950s, with the largest departure being the conversion of public parkland into a missile base in 1954
