Subject: Fwd: LEAP Advisory Panel Information - Read Ahead Materials

Rich,

Per our earlier emails, I am notifying you that I traveled to Arlington, VA 24-28 June to participate in a National Institute of Justice-funded Law Enforcement Advisory Panel series of workshop discussions at RAND Corporation to identify and prioritize operational needs for law enforcement that can be addressed by Science and Technology efforts. Travel, per diem, and lodging at federally-approved rates were covered. Below and attached is more information:

The purpose of the workshop was to identify operational needs for policing, along with promising solution approaches that are seen as good candidates to be addressed by science and technology (S&T) initiatives. The core deliverable will be a publicly-released report on the expert panel's opinions of the high-priority policing needs and potential solution ideas that might be addressed by S&T.

Our goal with this workshop is to identify those needs that, when addressed with S&T initiatives, would most improve key policing outcomes. We also want to capture the full flavor of the panelists' discussion, to provide S&T developers and funders with the context needed to understand the needs and develop solutions for them.

Greetings!

Please find attached the read-ahead information for LEAP panelists which includes both logistics and meeting information. We sincerely appreciate the sacrifices you are making to attend and participate in this important panel. Should you have any travel-related questions, please contact Jocqueline Johnson (copied on this message). If you have questions related to the content or agenda, please contact either John Hollywood (copied on this message) or me (email below, at signature) for clarification.

We look forward to a very productive week together and once again, thank you for agreeing to participate in this effort.

Safe travels and kind regards,

Susan
